Concerning the possibilities of the communication of disease by shellfish, they munication of the communication of the munication of disease by shelling, they state that though there is a prima facie probability that at times living typhold bacilli might be conveyed by shellfish to the consumer and produce enteric fever, experience confirms their view that the extent to which the illness is actually conveyed cannot be determined, the present state of knowledge on the subject not making it possible to make an accurate numerical statement. As indicating the commercial need of preventive measures, not only in the interest of the public health but for the protection of trade itself, it is estimated that the capital value of the industry around the coast is between £5,000,000 (£3,10,000) and £3,000,000 (£3,02,000), employing a large number of men, and additionally the interests of the retail trade are very extensive and "oyster scares." occurring from time to time, cause a serious diminution of the consumption of oysters and throw many men out of work.

FISHERMEN PLAY IN HARD LUCK

A Poor Show for the Tomato Crop in the Northern Neck.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
HEATHSVILLE, VA., March 5.-It is feared by many that the fishing industry in Northumberland as well as in the other counties of the Northern Neck has been seriously crippled by the severe weather during the latter part of February. The rivers were so blocked with ice that if was impossible for the fishermen to place their stakes in position, and in many places it has been a serious undertaking to haul them to the river-sides, Some of the in-shere fishermen, it is true, have commenced operation, but it will be some weeks yet before the owners of the larger traps will finish placing their traps. Usually all the nets are in position, and fish running nicely by the first of March. As several hundred men are dependent upon this industry for a living, it is prob

As several hundred men are dependent upon this industry for a living, it is probable that there will be "hard times' among the watermen this spring.

Some of the farmers of this section have sowed their tomato seed for the sariy crop, but on account of the failure in the crop last year, a very small acreage will be planted in the fruit this year. The late crops, it is also thought will be smaller this year than usual Some of the factories that "ran" last year will be closed this summer. Mr. Thus, Fallin, owner of the large factory at Coan, has announced that he will pay entitle the casts per bushel for tomatoes, if he runs his factory at all. This will scarcelly pay for handling.

The owners of the large tracks of timber left standing in this section are busy having it cut into cord wood. Cord wood is in big demand now, and the owners of the imbers are anxious to place it upon the market as soon as possible.

The furners of the Northern Neck ars now being confronted by a serious problem. Provender is getting very scarce and also very high, and the farmers are regretting that they did not pay more attention to the corn and hay crop, and a little less to tomatoes.

No news has been heard of Mrs. Beatley, who so mysteriously disappeared two weeks ago, and her friends are beginning to fear that there has been four long.
